Inspection and Assessment

Once the car is disassembled, each part is inspected and assessed to determine its condition. Parts that are damaged or worn beyond repair are typically replaced, while parts that can be repaired are sent for restoration.

Testing and Adjustment

After the car has been reassembled, it is tested to ensure everything is functioning properly. This includes checking the engine, brakes, suspension, and other systems. If any issues are found, adjustments are made to ensure the car is in optimal condition.
